Purpose of this compilation

During the first workshop in Brussels it was decided not to have a compulsory common list of interviews and scenarios to be recorded in all project languages. This is due to differences in national needs and cultures. It is, however, important to ensure that the partnership covers the defined target groups (these were at the meeting extended with travel and tourism).

This list serves as inspiration during the video preparations and recordings, the videos will be developed using students and will be based on the students’ own inputs and suggestions, only this way is it possible to reflect real content and youth culture.

Planned Results

The content will be audio / video recordings with transcriptions to facilitate easy adaptation into eLearning. The transcriptions will be translated into English.

Target and content

The content will culturally and content wise target students from:

- Electronics
- Catering and tourism

Page 2 of 15 Scenarios and Interviews – pools UK/05/B/F/LA162-355
Healthcare
- Media studies.
- International Trade (agreed on at the Brussels workshop)

The target groups are language teachers of LWUTL (Less Widely Used and Taught Languages) including minority and regional languages and ultimately their students who will benefit from the products developed by their teachers based on the material pools.

Example of content could be traditional apprentice jokes like a first day apprentice being sent to the store for “a long stand” or a tin of elbow grease.

Level / categorization

The materials will be categorized according to the Common European Framework of reference and the European Language Portfolio, the core parts of the materials will be suitable for students at levels A1 through B2 (Understanding, i.e. listening and reading).

For each set of materials (recording with transcription) there will be a table with:
- Short summary / description
- Estimated student level needed for understanding the content as is
- Estimated student level needed for using the content (adapted through help sources etc.)
- Cultural aspects covered
- Professional areas covered (e.g. electronics)
- Age group

Interview or scenario?

Interviews will be used where scenarios cannot serve the purpose. Scenarios will be the first choice wherever possible.

Suggestions of content suitable for scenarios

Job interviews

Recordings of students applying for a job. The scenario should include two or three characters, the employer (job interviewer) should be an adult. At best the scenario can reflect a typical meeting between an applicant and an employer.

The stolen bike

Originally a Dutch suggestion. A student discovers his/her bike stolen and discusses this with another student. Several cultural aspects can / should be covered like police, insurance, likeliness of having a bike stolen, etc.
At a medical clinic
Several aspect of culture can be revealed in a scenario replicating a visit at a medical clinic, e.g. bureaucracy, insurance, cost of medicine, etc.

Dining out
Several scenarios suggested by the partnership in Brussels dealt with situations like making a reservation, ordering at the table etc. A scenario can also include a small dialogue at the table between the guests. The scenario can in several ways reveal cultural aspects like suitable time for an evening meal etc.

Professional areas

Presentation of work related product
This scenario is well suited for targeting the chosen professional areas. A student tells about a product he / she has made

Installing broadband network
Language teaching points: Explaining things, making lists
Subject relevance: Electronics
The engineer from the local authority educational technology department drives up to a small rural school in her van and starts unloading boxes, cables, computer screens, keyboards etc. The school janitor pokes his head out of the door and asks her what she's doing. The engineer explains she's come to install the new broadband computer network to connect the school to the national grid for learning, and shows him all the equipment she's got, telling him what it does. The janitor looks thoughtful for a while, and finally says that that will be very helpful - especially after the electricity board have finally connected the school up for electricity - due to happen next year. He blows out his candle, locks the door, and shuffles off.

Constructing a bilingual website
Language teaching points: Translation between languages
Subject relevance: Media Studies, possibly Electronics
Keen young students in a college media studies department are gathered round a computer. One is typing in text. They discuss how to translate "homepage", "internet", "e-mail", "website" etc into their home language. They are pleased with their work and how good their language skills are. The typist says his granny would be proud of him. He returns home to find his granny at work on his computer at home, full of enthusiasm for it, and producing a punchline using all the loanwords from English that the students have just been painstakingly translating or creating neologisms for in the home language.
Granny finishes off with something like "Carson nach tuirt rium thu gun robh ceart cho cool?" (Why didn't you tell me that computers were so cool?)

Work placement with a Tourist Information Office

Language teaching points: Negotiating a service
Subject relevance: Catering and Tourism

Lots of visitors stop at the office to ask where they can find local music. The trainee fixes up with a local bar/hotel for an informal music session, and she negotiates for the musicians to get free drinks. It is agreed that they should start playing after the European Cup final finishes on the TV in the bar. However, the match goes to extra time, and then penalties, so the musicians continue drinking. When the match is finally over, there is only time for one tune before the bar has to close, but the musicians are "too tired" to play anyway, slumping onto/under the table as they try to play.

Work placement with daycare centre/old people's home

Language teaching points: Narrative, conversation strategies
Subject relevance: Healthcare

Earnest young student on placement is asked to encourage patients to reminisce. He is very anxious to help "the poor old folk" - very attentive, very encouraging when they speak, possibly to the point of being painfully patronising. This could be played straight with plenty of repetition of conversation elicitation strategies from the student, plus narrative language from the patient. Alternatively, it could be played for laughs with the patient relating a story that has a crude or shocking punchline that startles the student.

Television company

Language teaching points: Giving suggestions, swapping opinions, agreeing/disagreeing
Subject relevance: Media Studies

A small team of three enthusiastic new recruits is required to dream up a visual title sequence for a new children's cartoon. They are working over a large sketchpad that the camera can't see. They discuss the requirements - arresting/attractive, funny, easy to understand, colourful etc - and are very busy scribbling on the pad with their felt tip pens. After several disagreements and additions/deletions they finally agree and place the pad on the table so the camera sees the final result – an ugly mess.

Making a national dish (e.g. Hutspot, a Dutch dish)

Scenario showing how to make a national dish. Recordings in a kitchen with possible recordings of shopping before cooking.
Apprentice jokes
Scenarios with traditional jokes, e.g. the first day apprentices who are sent for elbow grease, bubbles for the spirit level, left hand screw drivers, etc.

Production of a music video (media studies)
The scenario gets behind the scene of a music video production and shows the producers and the musician himself (Richard Grey) who himself used to be a student at the college.

First day on the new job
Scenario with employee / apprentice being presented with where everything is, e.g. lockers, tools, bathroom, etc.

Social rules
Small scenarios showing how to great different people. The scenarios should reflect the social rules, e.g. the use of “Sie” in German (“De” in Danish). A Danish version could be two guests meeting another some time after a party, according to Danish social rule they are required to thank one another for last time together (even several months later).

Mistakes😄
Scenarios built on mistakes. E.g. a group of student looking for the “Farewell” restaurant and not realizing that farewell is not the name of the place.

Asking the way
A realistic scenario from real life where a person asks for the way to a place in town.

Sales person / client dialogue
Scenarios with costumers ordering, e.g. a holiday, or requiring information. N.B. this type of scenario can results in language above our target areas A1 to B2

Non native students
This scenario idea can be a mix of interview and scenario. In one of the planned Danish scenarios there is a meeting with a Chinese girl who tells about what the find is strange in Denmark (the other students!), the scenario takes form of an interview, but uses inserted photos and video clips to illustrate / demonstrate the content.
Youth culture

Street dancers
Scenario with presentation of a group of street dancers, the scenario may include interviews of the dancers.

Travel and Tourism

Tourist guides
Scenario showing planning of visit from students from another country. What to do and what to see, the recording could include footing of touristy scenes.

Booking a place on a summer camp/school

Language teaching points: Exchanging basic information, selling
Subject relevance: Catering and Tourism

A student phones the summer camp administrator. The administrator explains:

- what activities are available - language classes, music classes, outdoor activities
- what the accommodation range is - hotels, B&B, hostels, camping etc
- what the price is and what it includes

The administrator is good at selling and the student is impressed, so the administrator asks for the student’s details to send him the brochure. The student gives his name and address, and it emerges he’s calling from USA. The administrator has to explain that fees for non-EU students are higher, BUT that non-EU students also get a free pencil with an EU flag on it. The administrator asks for the student's telephone number, and the student says "Thank you, don't call me. I'll call you."
